FYI Connor and me just finalized what orders we add on both sides of the market and the moment we started Alex sold $90,000 worth of CEL in one klick and not only caused that our sell orders we entered did not had a chance to fill like expected - but it even caused that the bots sold CEL into our fresh new buy orders on Liquid ...

So instead of selling 10,000 CEL @ $5.80 we bought 10,000 CEL @ $5.70 (or something similar)

• I disagree that Alex should be allowed to sell $1M worth of CEL a day • I disagree that Alex should be allowed to sell $90k with one single klick • This way Alex forces us to be a buyer on Liquid ..

AND -> 10 minutes ago I sent out 30 email to OTC requests and quoted $5.85/CEL ... They will now all ask me for a requote @ $5.70-5.65 ...

Also a bad look that alex can sell into our orders and sell his own coins then tell us to sell from treasury to drop the price...

This is exactly (Alex behavior) what I was afraid of - if we don't first take control of the market, he will start using that and give me (and us) an excuse that because we are not controlling the market he is basically doing us a favor by "using his own money" to control the market. This is why I was pinging you earlier today, Johannes, to see if we can get there first

I don't easily run out of words or have a bigger and louder voice to talk over anyone trying to reason (aka having a shouting match) if needed but I think I am at loss now.

But let's please agree between us. We know what Alex will do in this rising market if we don't show something. So let's just

Oh by the way, I ma sure you saw Fractal's response but they can be our solution on Uniswap. It is still not fast enough for Alex for sure, but at least better than having no response
